

Bending Oak Permaculture Farm is a demonstration site that shows people what is possible as we move towards a more sustainable society. Whether you live on a farm, in the suburbs or in an apartment, come learn and experience firsthand how to create an abundance of the food, energy, and materials we need to not only survive, but to thrive, while also caring for future generations of human and non-human beings.

We constantly hear about the impending consequences of global warming. Often the narrative states that we will not be able to change our course in time, and the cost of fixing the problems before us is too high.

Permaculture provides a realistic framework in which we can work towards stopping or reversing global warming from its source. It uncovers surprisingly simple, attainable solutions that we can use to repair our environment—from soil, to water, to community.

Guided by one of our staff, learn how the unique elements of Bending Oak work together to make a functioning, productive, sustainable farm.

Permaculture, a morphing of the words permanent and culture, is a process of design that draws on the patterns and systems found in nature to ultimately create a culture that is beyond sustainable. Once established, a sound permaculture design continuously regenerates itself with little to no human input.
